

Application deadline for ag-based summer course is May 2

MANHATTAN, Kan. - April 15, 2013 - Kansas Foundation for Agriculture in the Classroom (KFAC) will again offer a graduate-level summer course for Kansas teachers in June. Full-tuition scholarships provided by agriculture donors are available, which make this exceptional resource an affordable option for interested educators.

"Connecting Your Classroom to Kansas Agriculture," a three-credit hour course, will be offered in Manhattan June 10 through 14. The theme for this course is general agriculture, and participants will be exposed to many topics including plant science, food science and biotechnology.

The KFAC course is offered through Kansas State University Division of Continuing Education, the College of Education and the College of Agriculture. Participants earn K-State graduate credit, and the course is approved for continuing education hours required of teachers for license renewal and salary advancement.

Applications are available here and on the KFAC website at www.ksagclassroom.org. The application deadline is May 2. To learn more about KFAC summer graduate courses, visit the KFAC website, visit KFAC on Facebook, or contact Cathy Musick, KFAC executive director, at (785) 320-4350.

###

About KFAC

The Kansas Foundation for Agriculture in the Classroom is a 501(c)(3) non-profit foundation that provides educational resources for Kansas teachers to help students connect Kansas agriculture to their own lives while meeting curriculum goals.

###

Kansas Foundation for Agriculture in The Classroom

Sheridan Wimmer
Program Assistant

ksfac@ksu.edu

Kansas Foundation for Agriculture in The Classroom

Cathy Musick
Executive Director

ksfac@ksu.edu